

Inspire Youth with Washington Business Week

Be a Company Advisor, Judge or Speaker

Are you a professional with a passion for leadership and helping young people succeed? Now you can make a difference for the next generation, whether it's for an hour, a day or a week.

At Washington Business Week, high school students learn crucial life skills as they role play as industry professionals, launch a company, and solve real-world challenges. This program wouldn't be possible without our business professionals like you.

Company Advisor

Make an impact in the lives of youth by serving as their guide through the 21st century workplace. Educate and empower your student team to reach their potential, and provide real-world context to their learning. WBW offers summer, in-school, and international advising experiences.

4– 8 days

Judge

Our judges evaluate our end-of-week competitions. At the Trade Show, role-play as an investor while student teams use their newly learned powers of persuasion to garner your investor "bucks." At the Stockholders Presentations, evaluate student performance in our college-level business simulation.

4 hours

Speaker

Share your expertise with up to 200 high school students that are eager to learn about 21st century skills. Topics range from entrepreneurship, leadership, and team dynamics to brainstorming, ethics, and more. If speaking is your passion, come share it with the leaders of the future!

1 – 2 hours

Washington Business Week has impacted over 6,000 professionals (and 60,000 students!) since 1976. This is the place for the upcoming leaders of today to impact the leaders of the future. Each summer, we host employees from over 50 local and national companies.
